What is an Espresso Makers Tamper?

A tamper is a small device that is used to tamp or pack espresso grounds into the espresso machine's basket. Its main purpose is to pack the coffee grounds evenly for the perfect espresso shot. During the process, care is taken to ensure that water is able to flow through the coffee in an even manner. Tamping requires some trial and error, and getting the right espresso makers tamper also helps the process.

At present, there are both manual and electric tampers available in the market. Tampers also come in different sizes, materials, and weights. Knowing how each aspect affects the brew is essential.

The Different Types of Tampers

There are a number of types of coffee tampers available in the market. Below mentioned are the top four ones.

A Domed Tamper

These are also called convex tampers because the base is rounded and comes to a little dull point towards the middle. When you tamp your coffee using these, you see a border at the edge of the portafilter basket. The base stays a little high when they are placed on a flat surface.

Flat Tamper

This is the most common type of tamper and has a flat base with a handle. These are ideal for beginners. The handles come in wood, aluminum and different colors of rubber.

Electronic Tamper

These are designed in a way that they apply the ideal pressure to the coffee grounds. They have built-in mechanisms that do all the work, and you do not have to put in any force or pressure manually.

Puck Tamper

A puck tamper looks like the puck used in a hockey game. It has a smaller handle, which offers more stability. This is also a very commonly used tamper.

Final Words

The perfect shot of espresso requires the perfect espresso makers tamper. Choose from the types above and check the size, material and weight for the perfect buy.
